“Lubrizol's President and Chief Executive Officer Rebecca Liebert elaborated, “The Technology and Innovation Centre will serve as a model for future global centres, aligning with our strategy of establishing interconnected innovation centres worldwide. Our innovation teams in India have already enabled significant innovation in the many industries we serve, including earning the company global customer innovation awards. We expect this centre to expand on those successes.”

“Our dynamic, dedicated team in Bangalore has been critical in bringing the development of our next generation user experience to life, which goes far beyond aesthetics. This new foundation enables us to better support financial institutions in their efforts to differentiate, grow and future-proof their organizations,” explained Gareth Gaston, Chief Product Officer, Candescant.

Ignacio Fernández, Director General of ProChile, expressed optimism about the Chile-India partnership, stating, “We are proud to showcase not only Chilean agri-food products but also the robust innovation and technology ecosystem we’ve built. There is immense potential for start-ups from both nations to collaborate in addressing global challenges such as climate change, healthcare innovation, renewable energy, and financial technologies.”

“India is a hotbed for technology innovation, and the depth of talent here is truly remarkable. I'm excited to work with visionary startups and our ecosystem to cultivate a dynamic environment where collaboration fuels the next wave of process intelligence advancements,” says Dr Monika Gupta, Head of Innovation, Celonis Garage.

“Tarun Bhatia, Regional Managing Director and Co-Head APAC Investigations Diligence and Compliance at Kroll, says, “From an India perspective, it is worrying that while almost all respondents (96%) expect financial crime risk to increase in 2025, only one out of three believe that their organization’s financial crime compliance program is very effective. Lack of technology investment and weak governance have been identified as the main reasons for heightened risks and the onus is on the boards and senior management to strengthen the governance framework.”
